

Engineering Concepts, Inc. Announces New Ownership

Fincastle, Virginia: Engineering Concepts, Inc. (ECI), a leading provider of professional and innovative civil engineering, site design, and surveying solutions for residential, commercial, and municipal clients throughout the Commonwealth of Virginia, announces new ownership in the firm.

Robert H. Wampler, Jr. and J. Scott Caldwell have acquired ECI from Hal T. Bailey, Sr., founder and owner. Mr. Bailey founded the firm in 1992 and has served as President and CEO since that time. He will continue to be an active member of the ECI team, serving as a consultant and business development advisor.

Mr. Wampler has been named as the new President of ECI. Upon graduating from Virginia Tech in 1995 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Civil Engineering, Mr. Wampler began his career at ECI. He has held the positions of Project Engineer, Design Manager and in 2005 became Vice President of ECI. Mr. Wampler became an owner in 2010 and is a licensed professional engineer in the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Mr. Caldwell began his career with ECI in 2001. While employed at ECI, Mr. Caldwell completed his degree in Civil Engineering Technology from Old Dominion University in 2003. Mr. Caldwell has served as a Survey and Engineering Technician, Project Manager and currently holds the position of Director of Surveying. He will assume the title of Vice President. Mr. Caldwell is a licensed land surveyor and professional engineer in the Commonwealth of Virginia.

“I am pleased to introduce Bobby and Scott as the new leadership at ECI,” said Hal Bailey, founder. “Their innovative ideas, strong customer focus, and engineering and design expertise will ensure ECI’s continued success as a top provider of civil engineering, environmental, and surveying services throughout the Commonwealth of Virginia.”

According to Mr. Wampler, “As the new President, I look forward to the opportunity to grow our market presence while continually providing advanced engineering design services and ideas, and maintaining the outstanding customer experience for which we are known.”
